Example Combat Rules

V.1.0 · 01.03.2026

Invented for software testing only.

1. General

1.1 Scope

These invented rules apply to every example bout held under the Example Body.

1.2 Grounded fighter

A fighter is grounded when any part of the body other than the feet touches the ground. A grounded fighter takes no further part in the round.

2. Prohibited actions

2.1 Prohibited targets

Strikes to the back of the knee, the neck and the feet are prohibited. See 1.2 for grounded fighters.

2.2 Grappling

Grappling is allowed only while both fighters stand. Throws onto the head are prohibited.

2.3 Two-handed weapons

A two-handed weapon must be held with both hands when striking. A shield may not be used to strike with its edge.

3. Penalties

3.1 Warnings

The marshal may give a verbal warning for a minor breach.

3.2 Cards

A yellow card is shown for a repeated breach; a red card removes the fighter from the bout (see 3.1).

3.3 Order of bouts

Paragraph 1 of this long provision exists so the rule page can be tested with a lot of text on a phone. It repeats the same invented wording about list conduct, the marshal's signals and the order of bouts, and it means nothing outside this test.

Paragraph 2 of this long provision exists so the rule page can be tested with a lot of text on a phone. It repeats the same invented wording about list conduct, the marshal's signals and the order of bouts, and it means nothing outside this test.

Paragraph 3 of this long provision exists so the rule page can be tested with a lot of text on a phone. It repeats the same invented wording about list conduct, the marshal's signals and the order of bouts, and it means nothing outside this test.

Paragraph 4 of this long provision exists so the rule page can be tested with a lot of text on a phone. It repeats the same invented wording about list conduct, the marshal's signals and the order of bouts, and it means nothing outside this test.

Paragraph 5 of this long provision exists so the rule page can be tested with a lot of text on a phone. It repeats the same invented wording about list conduct, the marshal's signals and the order of bouts, and it means nothing outside this test.

Paragraph 6 of this long provision exists so the rule page can be tested with a lot of text on a phone. It repeats the same invented wording about list conduct, the marshal's signals and the order of bouts, and it means nothing outside this test.

Paragraph 7 of this long provision exists so the rule page can be tested with a lot of text on a phone. It repeats the same invented wording about list conduct, the marshal's signals and the order of bouts, and it means nothing outside this test.

Paragraph 8 of this long provision exists so the rule page can be tested with a lot of text on a phone. It repeats the same invented wording about list conduct, the marshal's signals and the order of bouts, and it means nothing outside this test.

Paragraph 9 of this long provision exists so the rule page can be tested with a lot of text on a phone. It repeats the same invented wording about list conduct, the marshal's signals and the order of bouts, and it means nothing outside this test.

4. Equipment

4.1 Helmet

Every fighter wears a helmet that covers the whole head.
